RECORD OF THE CLASS.

JUNE 1892–JUNE 1898.

SUMNER RANKIN ALBEE.

Born, at Cambridge, Mass., April 24, 1867.
Died, at Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 21, 1892.

In 1889 Albee wrote, "I was born in the house in which I now live April 24, 1867. Began to go to school when five years old. First attended a private school about a year, and then began to go to the public schools, where I remained with the exception of one year (when I stayed out of school on account of a serious illness the previous summer) till I entered college. I do not at present recall anything else of startling interest connected with my life. I shall probably stay away from Cambridge next year and come to Harvard Law School the following year. Next year I shall probably be at Washington, D. C."

The plans which he then had he carried out. August 1889, to September 1890 he worked as stenographer in the office of the Judge Advocate General of the Navy Department at Washington. In 1890 he entered the Law School and remained there until his death in the vacation of 1892.

In college Albee belonged to the Young Men's Christian Association, the Everett Athenaeum, and the Finance Club. His work was somewhat specialized in studies in economics, history and Roman law, appropriate to the profession to which he meant to devote his life. He was not widely known, but his acquaintances all esteemed him as a quiet, earnest, responsible man, worthy of his Alma Mater and of the Christianity which he professed.

BURT McVAY ALLISON.

Boston, Mass., September 1889 to February 1890; Birmingham, Ala., February 1890 to September 1892; Louisville, Ky., September 1892 to November 1894; Cincinnati, O., November 1894 to June 1898.

Has been general agent of Employers' Liability Assurance Corp. L'd of London, England, with headquarters at Cincinnati, O. Is secretary and treasurer of Kentucky Cannel Co. Was married Oct. 12, 1892, at Louisville, Ky., to Mary Porterfield Young (Wellesley '90), daughter of Col. Bennett H. Young of Louisville, Ky. Is a member of the Harvard Club and Young Men's Business Club of Cincinnati, O. Has taken part in politics only in fighting adverse insurance legislation in Ohio. Has written some verse for "Life."

"Journeys limited to business trips to Boston. Impressed always with fact that one may get more out of life in Boston than in the Middle West.

"Busy year in and year out building up business in several States. Little or no time for the pleasures of reading and study, but the desire to 'go on' born at Harvard is alive.

"Regret to find Harvard spirit so low in South and in Ohio. Am sure this could be enlivened by action of alumni guided by President Eliot. The Athletic Association of Harvard Graduates should assist greatly in drawing alumni together."

OSCAR MILLION ANDERSON.

1889–1892 in employ of M. P. Railway at Omaha, Neb., and Denver, Colo. 1892–1898 in business at Neligh, Neb. At present representative at Grand Island, Neb., of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., of Chicago. Married at Omaha, Neb., Oct. 2, 1894, to Annie Russell Gibson of Neligh, Neb., daughter of William B. "My health broke down in fall of 1896 and I spent a year in Arizona, Mexico and Central America travelling, and found the climate and out of door life very beneficial to a lung trouble of mine. If any of the fellows should ever have weak lungs, I should be glad to answer questions about the Southwest, if I can."

CHARLES CARLTON AYER.

"My last report was dated at Leipsic, March 13, 1892. In January '93, I became instructor in Romance Languages at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, O., where I remained till June '94, when I returned to Germany to complete my studies; took the degree of Ph. D. at Strassburg in December '96, with thesis on 'The Tragic Heroines of Pierre Corneille.' The college year '97–'98 I was assistant professor of Romance Languages at the University of Colorado, and since April '98, I have been professor of the department. Since the last report I have travelled in Mexico and have taken numerous trips on the continent of Europe, in Germany, France, Switzerland, and Italy."

He was widely known and esteemed socially in Taunton, and was a member of several local clubs.

WILLIAM BURDELLE BENTLEY.

"The following is a summary of the events of my quiet career since graduation.

"I was assistant in chemistry at Harvard until March 1891, and occupied a portion of my time with laboratory teaching, under the supervision of Professor Jackson, during the first year. The remainder of the time was devoted to research work, the results of which were published by Professor Jackson and myself under titles 'On the Products Obtained by Action of Nitric Acid on Bromtrinitrophenylmalonic Ester' and 'Note on Tribrommononitrobenzol.' I received the degree of Master of Arts in 1890.

"In March 1891 I was elected adjunct professor of Chemistry and Physics in the State University of Arkansas, and was three years later made associate professor in the same subjects, a position which I still hold. During the past two years I have been able to do some research work, and have at present one paper awaiting publication, entitled 'The Action of Nitric Acid on Tribromacetanilide,' and another nearly ready.

"I was married in December 1891 to Susan Easte Prescott, of Cambridge. We have two children, William Prescott, born June 23, 1894, and Harold Jackson, born August 7, 1897."

WILLIAM REED BIGELOW.

"After graduating from the Medical School in '92, I served as surgical house-officer at the Mass. General Hospital, then as house-officer at the Boston Lying-in-Hospital. On April 1, 1894 I hung out my shingle at 128 Marlboro Street, and moved to 24 Marlboro Street in the following September. I have been assistant to Dr. Maurice H. Richardson, the surgeon, since June 1894."

ALBERT GALLATIN BRODHEAD.

Has not been heard from.

FREDERICK MANNING BROOKS.

B. D., Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, 1892. 1892–94 rector Grace Church, So. Boston. 1894 rector Church of the Incarnation, Lynn. Married Sept. 18, 1895 to Louise Bruce, daughter of Samuel Holmes Bruce of Boston. Is a member of the Blaxton (clerical) Club, Boston, and of the Twentieth Century Club, Boston. "Addresses before public meetings have been an interesting part of my work. I have made several short trips to different parts of the United States, and have written articles describing points of interest for various Lynn and Boston papers."

FREDERICK MELVIN BROWN.

1889–91 student Paris and Berlin. 1891–92 studying law in N. Y. 1892–93 in Georgia and Florida. 1893–96 horticulture and law study in California. 1896–97 practising law in Santa Ana, Cal. (member of firm of Anderson & Brown). 1897 law work in New York, as assistant to firm of Butler, Notman, Joline & Mynderse. "My classmate, Frederick Green, and I are co-workers in the same department (admiralty law) of the same office."

"Between June '89 and October '91, I visited all the European countries except Russia, Norway, Spain, and Portugal. Was especially impressed with the excellent preservation of the monuments of Greece, considering their antiquity. I saw much of the southern and western portions of this country. In August and September '97 I visited Mexico and found much in the relics of ancient civilization at San Juan, Teotihuacàn, and elsewhere to interest me. The efficiency of Diaz's virtual dictatorship was everywhere apparent. The Mexican tableland appears to me to be the best summer resort on the continent."

GARDNER CUTTING BULLARD.

Since 1891 with Harding, Whitman & Co., dry goods commission merchants, Boston. Married May 17, 1893 to Mary Arnold Whitman, daughter of William Whitman of Brookline. PHILIP CODMAN.

Born, at Brookline, Mass., Oct. 6, 1868.
Died, at Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 28, 1896.

Philip Codman, son of James M. Codman, of Brookline, was fitted for college at Mr. Noble's school in Boston. In college he was well known and much liked. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, the Δ. K. E., the A. Δ. Φ., the Hasty Pudding Club, the A. D. Club. After graduation he spent some time in travel, making a trip around the world in 1890, and then began a post-graduate course at the Bussey Institution and Arnold Arboretum, in June 1891 entering the office of Olmsted, Olmsted and Eliot, landscape architects. On the death of his brother, Henry S. Codman, who died while in charge of the preparation of the World's Fair grounds at Chicago in 1893, Codman represented the firm in their work at the World's Fair. He was also connected with the firm's work on the Boston parks and at Mr. George W. Vanderbilt's estate, Biltmore, near Asheville, N. C. After entering business for himself his more noteworthy work was in connection with laying out the grounds about the Grant Monument on the Morningside Drive, New York, some park work for Salem, Mass., and some public work in Philadelphia on which he was engaged at the time of his death. By his death a career of great promise of distinction and public usefulness was cut short.

CHARLES FREDERICK COGSWELL.

ANDREW FULLER CRAVEN.

Ph. D., John Hopkins University, 1893. Since October 1893 prof. of Economics, Columbian University, Washington, D. C.

HARRY BERT CROWL.

"Soon after graduating from Harvard, I served an apprenticeship in the chemical laboratory of the Otis Steel Co., Ltd., of Cleveland, Ohio; then took up a course of study along the lines of special chemical work at Case School of Applied Science at Cleveland. The position of chemist at the Joliet Wks. of the Illinois Steel Co. was offered to me, which I accepted and remained there one year, leaving to take the position of chief chemist and assistant superintendent of the Steel Department of the Colorado Coal & Iron Co, at Pueblo, Colo. I remained there one year and accepted the position of chemist and car-wheel inspector of the Griffin Wheel & F'dy Co. of Chicago, but remained with them only a short time, when I established and conducted a general laboratory of my own at Duluth, Minn. The great Mesaba Iron Range was just being opened up then, and the experience I had in the examination of mining properties and general chemical work has been of much value to me.

"I remained in Duluth over four years when I had a good opportunity to sell out. I did so, and returned to Cleveland, my home, for a rest and to "look about" for some business opening. I have had several offers from iron and steel companies to accept positions of chemist but refused them. General business, especially the branch of sales department, has always had a greater attraction for me than chemistry.

"I am now general state agent for the Solar Gas & Machine Co. of New York; our machines generate acetylene gas, which is the coming illuminant of the present age. In addition to the above position, I am Manager of the Detroit branch house of the Monitor Oil Co. of Cleveland, O. I find that my experience in chemistry comes into play almost every day and consider it a good grounding for general business. Am a member of the Colorado Scientific Society and the Lake Superior Mining Institute. My journeys have all been in this country and most all have been of a business nature, covering considerable territory in the west and north.

"My permanent address is Detroit, Michigan."

EARNEST WEBSTER DUSTAN.

Born at Milton, Mass., July 8, 1866.
Died at Wareham, Mass., Oct. 4, 1895.

After leaving college Dustan spent a year at Yale Theological Seminary, and then, having become an Episcopalian, entered the Middle Class in the General Theological Seminary in New York, from which he received the degree of B. D. in 1892. In the same year he was called to Trinity Church, Sharon Springs, N. Y., of which he was rector at the time of his death. He was married June 4, 1890, to Miss Maria Walker Bartholow, who, with a son, survives him. At college Dustan was well known as an athlete, rowing in his class boat through all the four years and winning a prize for a running high jump. At Yale, too, he won a prize over a large number of Yale men for a high jump — a feat in which he took the greatest satisfaction. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding and of the Society of Christian Brethren. He won at college, as at Phillips Academy, Andover, where he had studied, the hearty respect of his classmates by his modesty and sincerity as well as by his religious earnestness and conscientiousness, while his cheerfulness and loyalty caused him to be prized as a friend. The same traits characterized his brief period of service as a pastor, and his fine devotion to his work had already won for him a marked influence in the community where he was settled. "Preaching was to him a service of prayer; he lived by the direct inspiration of the Scriptures." In the summer of 1895 he had been for some time in ill health, but was considered better. He was taking a rest of a few days at Wareham when his death was caused by a complication of troubles resulting in a clot of blood on the heart.

Died, at Gloucester, Mass., Feb. 8, 1894.

G. S. Harvey was prepared for college at the public schools of Gloucester. After graduation he spent a year acting as administrator of his father's estate and agent in carrying on the blacksmith business which he left. In February 1890 he entered the law-office of Charles A. Russell of Gloucester, and devoted himself assiduously to the study of law. In January 1893 he went west for his health, but returned in June to accept the position of clerk of the courts, made vacant by the resignation of Sumner D. York, Esq. His health, however, rapidly grew worse, and in November of last year, just after he had been admitted to the Essex Bar he resigned his office, and went to Asheville, N. C. He died a few days after his return to Gloucester — Not widely known in college he gained by his genial disposition and kindly manner a large circle of friends at his home, and he had already a recognized position in the community.

FREDERICK BOYDEN JACOBS.

Born, at South Scituate, Mass., Dec. 1, 1864.
Died, at Norwell, Mass., Sept. 2, 1896.

Frederick Boyden Jacobs was born at South Scituate, Mass., Dec. 1, 1864. He attended the public schools of South Scituate and the Rockland High School until 1884. He then spent one year at Phillips Exeter Academy, entering Harvard College from the Middle Class in 1885. In the college he was soon recognized as a man of more than ordinary ability. He received a "Detur" in the Sophomore year, was one of the "first eight" of the Phi Beta Kappa from '89, and delivered a "Dissertation" in Sanders Theatre at Commencement. In the Law School, too, he stood high in scholarship, receiving an A.M. with his LL.B. in 1892.

Though Jacobs joined none of the college societies, except the Everett Athenaeum and the Exeter Club, and took no active part in athletics, he was well known to the class and had many warm friends among its members. In the Law School, he was a member of the Ames-Gray Law Club and of the Phi Delta Phi, and an editor of the Harvard Law Review. In 1892 he was elected secretary of his Law School class. At home, he had the confidence and respect of his fellow-townsmen, who, in 1892, elected him a member of the School Committee for three years, and who, had his health permitted, would undoubtedly have carried out their expressed intention to elect him to the State Legislature.

Admitted to the Suffolk Bar in July, 1892, he entered the office of Hutchins & Wheeler, in Boston, and later opened an office on his own account. In the summer of 1894, however, his health gave way, and the greater part of the following two years he spent in Georgia and in the Adirondacks. The change of air at first afforded him some relief, but it soon became clear that consumption had gained a firm hold, and for months there had been no hope of his recovery. On Sept. 2, 1896 he died at his home at Norwell, Mass.

MOSES DAY KIMBALL.

Born, at Boston, Mass., Feb. 16, 1868.
Died, at Washington, D. C., March 31, 1893.

Kimball spent his earlier life in Boston, and was fitted for college at Mr. Hopkinson's School. In college he was a member of the Institute of 1770, the Hasty Pudding Club, the Art Club, the Pierian Sodality, the St. Paul's Society. At graduation he wrote, "My life has been uneventful thus far." He had at one time intended to study for the ministry, but in the autumn of 1889 he entered the Law School. In his law-course his unusual intellectual power, which his college courses had not called out, promptly showed itself. He graduated a distinguished student, taking the A. M. with his LL. B., and speaking the Law School part (a particularly interesting one on one aspect of the law relating to employees). He became at once private secretary to Justice Gray of the U. S. Supreme Court, and while thus occupied died in March 1893.

Our classmate P. F. Hall, who was with him in the Law School, writes as follows:

"Day Kimball's work in the Law School was a splendid example of what can be done by one who adds to a good mind the untiring and conscientious will to achieve the best. Whatever the subject might be, whether simple or difficult, he approached it with reverence for what it contained and a determination to do it justice in his study. To his thoroughness and perhaps also to a love of mental orderliness, any proposition always took with him its place in larger divisions of the law, and it was his habit to answer a question by sketching out the law of the subject generally and indicating the relation of the answer to kindred points. Equally marked with the fidelity of his work was his hearty friendliness to all his fellow students and his readiness to give valuable time to helping them out of difficulties; and into this readiness entered also his love for the law which prevented any part of it from being trivial to him. This devotion to his profession blinded him, as the sad event showed, to the proper measure of his physical strength, and deprived the state of his most promising life and service; but he lives and works in the inspiration which he gave and will always give to those who knew him."

JAMES GORE KING.

LL. B. and A. M., Harvard, 1892. Entered law office of Miller, Peckham and Dixon, 80 Broadway, N. Y., in October 1892, and is now a member of the firm. Born, at Salem, Mass., March 11, 1867.
Died, at Chicago, Ill., April 19, 1898.

J. R. Smith came to college from the Salem High School. In college he was a faithful and active member of the Society of Christian Brethren, and, immediately on graduation he entered Andover Theological Seminary, where he completed the course in 1892. One of his seminary classmates writes: "Impulsive, forceful, always strong; he has left an impress of himself on our class which must endure and which we all gladly cherish." He was ordained pastor of the Memorial Church, Georgetown, Mass., Sept. 1, 1892. In 1895 he resigned, and soon afterward took up business in Connecticut, then in Philadelphia, and in February 1898 in Chicago, where he was manager of the A. T. Thompson Co., manufacturers of optical projection apparatus, electric lamps, etc., as well as representative of the Illinois Carbonating and Filtering Co. In April 1898 he was engaged in overseeing repairs on a large carbonator, when it exploded, crushing his left leg. The shock was so great that amputation was impossible, and the accident proved fatal. Smith's pastor in Salem, Rev. Dr. De Witt S. Clark, wrote of him: "His death was a great shock to us all here. He was a fine fellow, genuine, earnest, enterprising, and with excellent gifts. I think he had a special fitness for business life, in which he was developing a rather unusual ability. I greatly respected him for not waiting around for a pulpit such as he wanted, but for going right at the thing which offered, in a practical way."

Smith was married, Sept. 22, 1892, to Mary Evelyn Lyman, daughter of Dr. Jabez B. Lyman of Salem. A son, Newton Lyman Smith, was born Aug. 14, 1894.

MAX WINKLER.

"Have taught ever since I left College. My first position was in the University of Kansas as assistant professor of Modern Languages. Since 1890 I have been connected with the University of Michigan." Is now assistant professor of German in the University of Michigan. Ph.D., Michigan, 1892. Studied in Berlin 1892–93; spent the summer of 1894 in Germany. Has published an edition of Lessing's Emilia Galotti (D. C. Heath & Co.), 1895, and is soon to publish editions of Goethe's Egmont (Ginn & Co.), and Schiller's Wallenstein (MacMillan & Co.).

THORNTON WOODBURY.

"My occupation since leaving college has been divided into three parts: Travelling, practising law, and running a newspaper in Manchester, N. H., called the Manchester Union.

"I travelled very extensively for a good many years. I have been as far north as Hudson Bay and as far south as Mexico, and I have been in almost every state and territory from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"One of the most enjoyable trips I ever took was in the summer of 1894, with 'Billy' Randall, '90, in the Madre Mountains in Mexico, looking for a lost Spanish quicksilver mine."

I have also made the grand tour abroad, going as far as Grand Cairo and up the Nile and I have made the grand North American tour across the Canadian Pacific to Vancouver and Victoria from Montreal.

The second division, practising law, I have become a member of the Colorado and California bars. Have practised both in Denver and San Francisco. Was for a year assistant general counsel of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company and was assistant district attorney for the county of Arapahoe in the city of Denver. My practice in California was largely criminal and as it became in time distasteful, an opportunity arising to get the control of the largest daily paper in New England, outside of Boston, I embarked in the enterprise with my brother three years ago. We have been successful beyond our farthest expectations. I am happy to state I am married; but have no children, I am sorry to say.

I belong to no clubs, although I was for some time a member of the Denver Club. I have taken no part in politics nor have I held any offices of trust, except that of officer and director in the Union Publishing Company, a corporation which owns the Manchester Union.

My life is at the present time one of intense application to hard work, as any newspaper man in the Class will understand. I am in the best of health and spirits; enjoy life fully as much as I ever did and have only to say that good fortune has smiled upon me in every way, shape and manner.

I wish all my classmates the best of the same good fortune and extend to them by this letter my heartiest regards and affection."

GEORGE ELLIOT WRIGHT.

LL. B. and A. M., Harvard, 1892.

Since November 1893 in practice of law at Seattle, Washington. Married, July 16, 1895, at Delhi, Ill., to Mary Estelle Wyckoff of Seattle, Wash., daughter of Ambrose Barkley Wyckoff. Has two children, Selah Elizabeth Wright, born Nov. 16, 1896, and Annah Barkley Wright, born Feb. 8, 1896.

FRANK EDWARD ZINKEISEN.

Born, at Milwaukee, Wis., April 22, 1867.
Died, at Chicago, Ill., Nov. 10, 1895.

Zinkeisen was born and brought up in Milwaukee, but his immediate preparation for college was at Mr. Hopkinson's School in Boston. His college career is well indicated by the list of societies that he belonged to, the Institute, the Hasty Pudding Club, the Historical Society, the Signet, and the O. K. He devoted himself largely to history, and, after graduating he spent one year in studying history in the Graduate School, taking his A. M. in 1890. 1890–93 he spent in Germany, chiefly at the University of Berlin, where he received the degree of Ph. D., Aug. 5, 1893. His doctor's thesis on "Die Aufänge der Lehnsgerichtbarkeit" was published, and was reviewed in the N. Y. Nation, Sept. 14, 1893. After his return to this country he continued at Cambridge his historical studies, working for a period as assistant to Professor Emerton, and published articles in Von Sybel's Historische Zeitschrift, the English Historical Review (on 'The Donation of Constantine"), and the Popular Science Monthly (on "Anglo-Saxon Courts"). In the summer of 1895 he was appointed assistant professor of History in the University of Illinois. He felt himself, however, unsuited to the unaccustomed work, and, to the great regret of the authorities of the university and of his colleagues, resigned his position almost immediately after entering upon his duties. He had just taken up further plans of study in Chicago when he met his death by being run over by a railway train. The loss to American historical scholarship from his untimely end is a serious one, and the many friends who prized him will long remember his pleasant companionability and eager, forceful character.

Temporary Members and Special Students

PHILIP STANLEY ABBOT.

Born, at Brookline, Mass., Sept. 1, 1867.
Died, on Mt. Lefroy, Alberta, British America, Aug. 3, 1896.

Philip S. Abbot was prepared for college at the Milwaukee High School, and entered with the class of '89. At the end of the freshman year he stood second in the class. An illness at the beginning of his sophomore year interrupted his course and he made an extended journey with R. W. Herrick, '89, to the West Indies, Mexico, California and Alaska. The next autumn he returned to college and graduated in 1890, summa cum laude, and with honorable mention in Greek, English Composition and History. He had also done excellent work in fairly advanced courses in Mathematics. He was an editor of the Harvard Monthly. He graduated from the Law School in 1893, taking an A. M. with his LL. B., and entered the office of Warren & Brandeis, Boston. In October 1893 he went to Milwaukee to be in the law offices of the Wisconsin Central Railroad. After a year he held the position of general solicitor for one of the branch lines, the Milwaukee and Lake Winnebago Co., and had responsible work in the completion of the line. In 1896 he wrote for the projected Class Report as follows: "I expect to return to the East and settle permanently in Boston within a year. One man's first years at the law are much like another's, and I have nothing especial to report. Outside of office hours, my nearest approach to excitement has been two weeks and a half last summer spent in climbing without guides in the Rocky Mountains of Canada. Our party made the second highest ascent yet recorded in the Dominion. We mean to try again this year. I do not know any sport which equals mountaineering on new ground. You have excitement, it is splendidly healthful; you exercise almost every faculty; you are in the midst of the most glorious natural beauty, — and you kill nothing." From this expedition, carried out in July 1896, he did not return. By one of the accidents incidental to mountain work in an unexplored country, he was killed by a fall from the side of a cliff close to the summit of Mt. Lefroy, Alberta, British America, on August 3. The stirring story of the tragic ascent may be read in the memorial number of Appalachia for November 1896. In the developed fulness of his unusual powers and the maturity of a noble character, a man was taken from the earthly companionship of his friends who to many has been and will be one of the strongest influences of their lives, and whose place as a friend will for them never be filled. "Lesser men," wrote in a memorial address Prof. George N. Palmer, "may be mourned, for when they die they disappear. But his few years and gallant death, illuminated as they were by well doing and Christian hope, must always be to his friends a source of gladness." J. H. R.

FRANCIS RAMSEY BROOKS.

Born, at Memphis, Tenn., March 7, 1867.
Died, at Chicago, Ill., April 12, 1898.

F. R. Brooks entered Harvard from Phillips Exeter Academy. Owing to an accident received in the Chemical Laboratory he left college early in the freshman year. He afterward studied law at Northwestern College, Chicago, and medicine at the Chicago College of Physicians and Surgeons, at the University of Virginia, and in New York. He began the practice of law in 1890 and of medicine in 1893. He had devoted much time to literature, and in 1896 published a volume of poems entitled "Margins."

CHARLES EDGAR BUTLER.

Born, at Silver City, Idaho, April 14, 1867.
Died, in California, 1897.

C. E. Butler graduated with the class of 1890. After graduation he spent a year in Mexico, travelling for his health, and later took up his residence at Palo Alto, Cal., with the occupation, as he reported to the Secretary in 1896, of "trying to regain health." He died in 1897.

HENRY REGINALD ASTOR CAREY.

Born, at Newport, R. I., July 9, 1865.
Died, at New York, April 29, 1893.

After leaving Harvard Carey travelled extensively all over the world and finally in 1892 took up his permanent residence in Newport. He bought the Newport Herald in November 1892, and personally edited and managed his paper. At the same time he was elected to the Rhode Island Legislature on the Democratic ticket by a majority of 398 in a strictly Republican district. He took much interest in all public affairs in Newport, and found himself a liberal and public-spirited citizen of his native city. He was devoted to out-of-door sports, yachting, driving, hunting, and was anxious that all classes in the community should share in them. Of his interest in college athletics the Carey Building on Holmes Field (or the substitute for it provided by the Corporation on Soldiers' Field) erected by his gift in 1889–90 is a lasting memorial. He died suddenly of heart-disease April 29, 1893, and was widely mourned as a large-hearted friend and a man who promised by the use of his natural gifts and his great wealth to render high public service.

CHARLES LAWTON CASE.

Since leaving college has been in business at Fall River, Mass., and N. Y. City. Married Oct. 27, 1894 to Harriet Francis Bronson, daughter of George Whitefield Bronson of Fall River. "As a sort of side issue I purchased a stock farm about a year ago in the town of Canton, Mass. I find that it absorbs my surplus funds about as quickly as anything I know of. But I have found farming immensely instructive and can recommend it to any of my classmates who are looking for a healthful though expensive pastime."

JOHN BARNARD DARLING.

Born, at Boston Jan. 19, 1867.
Died, at North Cambridge, Nov. 22, 1893.

He was the seventh and youngest child of Mary Frances (Barnard) and the late Charles Kendall Darling who were also born in Boston, their respective families having been settled in New England for some generations prior to the Revolution.

John was delicate, of an even temperament and retiring disposition, pure in mind and heart, and sensitive and conscientious almost to a fault. He enjoyed reading, studying and music more than the sports into which most boys enter so actively. Keenly appreciative of nature in her material and visible aspects, he loved an out-of-door life, if lived quietly; and his summers, always passed until his sickness at the sea-shore, at the mountains, or in the country were to him full of rich experiences and happy memories.

He attended the public schools of Boston; passing successively through the Rice primary, Rice grammar and the Latin. He was the valedictorian of his grammar class ('81); and in the Latin school he maintained until his health began to fail a high rank in scholarship, as many as four prizes being awarded him in a single year. He was graduated in June 1885 and in the September following entered Harvard with the class of '89 with the intention of studying medicine after completing the college course. He remained, however, only through the Freshman year. At the beginning of the Sophomore year, ill-health compelled an abandonment of his plans, and until his death at home more than seven years afterwards, he bravely and patiently bore his affliction, attracting the deepest sympathy of his college and other friends.

He is buried in the family lot at Forest Hills.

Lives at 9 Cedar Street, Worcester, Mass.

HORACE DELANO EVERETT.

"After leaving college in the spring of '87, I entered the employ of the Morning Star Publishing House, printers and publishers, with whom I remained until the spring of '92, when the opportunity was presented to my brother and myself to purchase the printing business of the "Williston Press," which had been established and maintained for several years by the proprietors of The Golden Rule, the official organ of the Christian Endeavor Society. With this business we also acquired the ownership of the Offertory Calendar, a patented device for use in church collections which has had a great success and is one of the most valuable features of our business. We have had built and patented for us a remarkable press, printing, numbering, and collating, at one operation, the envelopes required for our Offertory Calendar. The capacity of this press is from thirty to forty thousand envelopes daily, its output for the past year being over two and one-half millions. Our business is incorporated under the title of The Everett Press Company, of which I am the president.

"In addition to my interests in The Everett Press Company, I am treasurer of The Severy Impression Process Company, a corporation formed by Mr. Severy and myself to develop and place on the market an invention from which we anticipate unusual returns. This invention, which has for its object the doing away with "make-ready," which forms from twenty-five to seventy-five per cent. of all presswork, has been patented in this and over twenty other countries, and its future seems very bright to those who are interested in its development."

EMIL CHARLES PFEIFFER.

In business at 7 Tremont Place, Boston.

GEORGE TURNER PHELPS.

"At the issue of the last report I was a member of '92, teaching music privately in San Francisco, California. Commencement '93 sent me a degree as of '91. A trial of teaching Secondary English at the Belmont School, Belmont, California, resulted in my spending the spring of '94 with Faculty friends at the University of Indiana. Here I discovered creative ability in English. Since Commencement '94 I have been at home in Cambridge — tutoring, accompanying for recital and concert work, singing in chorus and quartet choirs, coaching singers, lecturing on Musical Biography, English Cathedrals, the Mediaeval Monastery, above all writing short stories and poems. Four years patronage of the United States mail (return stamps enclosed) has produced the unintentional publication in "The Philistine" for January 1898 of one poem, "Parade at Unveiling." Having no mechanical genius, Fate makes me the patentee of "The Loki Burner," a device for cooking and heating by gas generated in the burner from kerosene oil. For the past year my business office (The Loki Burner Company) has been at 53 Cornhill, Boston, Mass."

WILLIAM POTTER STEAD.

"I was for three years, and up to the time of Mr. Walker's death a junior partner of E. W. Walker & Co. mfgrs of sheep leather, Providence, R. I. After Mr. Walker's death I continued a year in the same business, with Harry A. Cary of New York City, as a partner, under the name of Stead & Cary. July 1895 I made up my mind to go into a commission house. My idea was to take a year or more and make a study of it, and go through a mill as a common workman, for the purpose of acquiring a practical insight into the manufacture of woolen and worsted goods. A friend of mine made the necessary arrangements with Messrs. Lewis Anderson & Co., and I began work at the Coburn Woolen Mills, Skowhegan, Maine, July 25, 1895, at 6 A. M, working until 6 P. M. each day. I have worked in all the departments of the mill — wool sorting, scouring, dyeing, the picker house, carding, spinning, weaving, finishing and designing. A good portion of my time lately has been devoted to fabrication and weaving samples. I have also spent some time at Lakeside Worsted Mills, East Madison, Maine, studying the designing and finishing of worsteds under Mr. Edwin Gledhill. I have invitations from several of the mills in Maine to spend a few days at the mills and see their methods of manufacturing and shall probably accept some of them. The only times I have been before the public were February 28, in Coburn Hall, Skowhegan, Maine, and March 6, in Opera House at Waterville, Maine, when I played the part of George Payton in Boucicault's five act drama the "Octoroon," given by Milburn Club, under Mr. Phineas Leach, formerly of James Hearn's "Shore Acres company. The play was a great success."

"After leaving Mr. Anderson's mills at Skowhegan, Me., I obtained a position with Messrs. H. J. Libby & Co., Commission House, here in N. Y. I am unmarried and in good health, and doing fairly well."

HERBERT HENRY DARLING, Class Treasurer

POEM.

"A PLEA FOR LOYALTY."

By Charles Warren

"He 's nae sae bonny but he 's leal to them he loves." Robert Louis Stevenson in "Catriona."

Read at the Second Triennial Dinner June 25, 1895.

There 's a call that 's ringing clear
For all Harvard men to hear;
Come back, ye sons of Harvard, back once more.
Harvard made you what you are,
Now she calls you from afar;
Come back, and prove you 're loyal to the core.

Drop your independent schemes,
Drop your fears and doubts and dreams,
Drop them all and give your college true support.
Harvard looks to-day to you
To spread a spirit new
Which shall place her first in learning and in sport.

By her honored trust impressed,
With her call to do their best,
You must make her sons to Harvard stand more true.
The spirit that they need
You graduates must breed,
You must teach them to be loyal through and through.

"Harvard Loyalty" 's the word
That should everywhere be heard;
That 's the word for which our college ought to stand;
Not "Yale spirit" or "Yale pluck,"
Not "Harvard's beastly luck,"
But "Harvard Loyalty" throughout the land.

That 's the cry that 's ringing clear,
That 's the spirit needed here,
Harvard, Harvard first for us in every line;
So come back and prove you 're true,
Show what Harvard means to you,
Come back and back up Harvard, Eighty Nine.

* * * * * * * * *

Eighty-nine has replied to the cry from afar;
And has sent back its well-known cheer.
It has come like the old volunteers of the war;
To the call shouts the answer "Here."

For every fellow there waits here a friend
Who has longed to have him around, —
A welcome for every man without end
To the old class camping ground.

Yes, here is our regiment's bivouac;
And comrade by comrade to-night,
Together we drink as in time far back, —
To-morrow — again the fight.

Together we drink to a loyal faith,
To a trust in our college, our friends,
To a will to work for Harvard till death,
To the men on whom Harvard depends.

Mustered one hundred and twenty strong,
The old Eighty Ninth side by side,
Who at its head could ever belong
But Trafford our Colonel and pride?
Old Perry Trafford whose hair's growing gray
While hustling the law LL. B.,
Just as he hustled the Yale men one day
In a manner delightful to see.
None of the class is more honored by all,

By graduates young and old;
Discreet, courageous, and firm as a wall,
Whose friendship 'tis honor to hold.
So here's to Perry, we drink to him first,
Eighty Nine — all up — while ye still have a thirst.

Behind him comes marching the head of the line,
With superior looks and with pride that is fine,
The Company A, 'tis the married men, plain;
They hold their heads high and they cannot refrain
From pitying glances at those who are still Mere bachelors living their lives at their will.
And first in their ranks is the bold Saltonstall,
Who owns the Class cradle and still has the call;
He always at dinners replied to the toast
Of "The Ladies," the ladies are still quite his boast;
In order to stand by his record, he shows
Up to date three girls as the height of his woes.
Behind him march eighty "grads," all married men,
And each of them glad just for one night again
To escape from the squallings, the teethings, the bills,
And to drink with his classmates as much as he wills;
But each of them knows that he's got to beware,
At the end of the feast there's a wife on the stair.
Among them the portly, sedate financier,
Jack Morgan, whose language was full of good cheer.
Does he manage the bond business now on the plan
That he erstwhile the Pudding Theatricals ran?
If he does, then for Jack we must pass round the hat,
For Morgan in those days no profits begat.

Married are Perkins and Storrow and Clark,
All of them keeping their college days dark,
Hiding from wives their old college record,
Knowing their lives then were possibly chequered.

Perkins says nothing about the bold sign
Shown in his window to old Eighty-nine,

"Girls wanted" in Manter appearing one day,
Led all the wayfarers sadly astray.

Storrow says nothing about his old name,
Given to him as his title to fame,
"Hell and old blazes" just tickled the crew;
But Ned's better half takes a different view.

Walter Clark, too, says naught of the stuff that he wrote
On the Crimson, that paper unworthy of note.
Perhaps he 'll admit, for he 's now more discreet,
The Crimson was hardly a bright newsy sheet.

Does Marquand describe to his wife with vim
The men whom he slugged and those who slugged him?

Does Darling repeat those orations of old?
Does his wife think his stories, the Advocate sold?
Or does care of the class and its finances press
So heavy on him he 's no time to confess?

Does Taylor inflict on his family too
That music so weird, that profanity blue?
Does he still jump around and curse them all out,
As the Pudding chorus he bullied about?

Do Cabot and Lathrop look solemn and grave,
And spout philosophical theses, and rave
O 'er the general damfoolishness shown by all men?
Or are they more pleased with this life now again?

Does Sears still manoeuvre for Yale dual leagues?
Has his own dual league put an end to intrigues?
Does he still hope to be of all things the head?
Or is he by wife and by family led?

Do Dustan and Schroll talk less, or more loud?
Has Richardson yet caught up with the crowd?

Does long-legged Reynolds still finger the chips —
The red, white and blue — as the cards down he flips?
Does he manage canoe clubs, or is it too true
That he cannot now paddle alone his canoe?

Does Hight ever tell of his pessimist day?
Does he have tugs of war still his strength to display?
Does his wife know in full from Bullard's lip
All his acts and deeds on a Glee Club trip?

Now next march the bachelors cheerful and merry,
Ready for beer or for fizz or for sherry;
Fearing no welcome awaiting at home,
Careless from where or to where they may roam.
First in the list alphabetically placed,
Those Dromios Burr and Bob Bush e'er misplaced;
Always confused by Boston's fair lasses,
Simply because they both wore glasses.

Bush now 's a gasman of Gowanus canal,
Buried in Brooklyn apart from his pal.
Does Burr of the proctor he damned ever think?
Does he e'er cast his dignity off for a drink?
Then Dodge, our Odist, whose name is of use
Through its length as example of English, diffuse.
Next there comes Hunneman, dear old class poet,
How when they let him he did use to go it;
Spouting of "goddesses," "muses," and such,
'Till we all pained cried "Enough, yea, too much."
Poems by the foot, by the yard, by the mile,
Made while you wait — quite in any old style;
Like an old mule — I mean — mill wheel a turning,
Rightly the title of Class Drooler earning.

* * * * * * * * *

Now keep silent, "favete omnes,"
Take off your hats and down on your knees,

Hold in your breath and in silence acknowledge
The wondrous production produced by a college;
Some of our class have achieved renown,
Some of the class have startled the town,
But no one has leaped to so dizzy a height,
Never like him was so awful a sight.
Who ever owned such centrifugal bones
As his, our pride, E. C. Pfeiffer — "Paul Jones?"
Here was his bet made and here did he start
Posing at first as the nude in art,
Pfeiffer, the "Trilby" of old Eighty-nine;
"The altogether" was quite in his line.
Pfeiffer the poet, the schoolmaster too,
Also the head of the Varsity crew.
Like a wandering Jew round the world doth he pass,
And renders immortal our glorious class.

And next Charley Downer the cool-headed man,
Whose lips with tumults of silence just ran.
Though to be a Harvard man ne'er did he fail,
Charley always, at ball, was a downer of Yale.

Then Grew who real estate sold in the West,
Whether land or Grew was sold, Neddy knows best.
Though a tenderfoot there our Ned may have been,
Let no tender arm was his left one I ween.
And many a man will recall H. A. A.
And the gruesome blows Ned could put into play.

There are others of whom e'er I finish my task
About their career we've some questions to ask.

Is Perry still confident, sure that we'll win?
Does Thayer still think Democrats children of sin?

Has Howe yet been able to make his voice heard?
Has Goodwin succeeded in saying a word?

Is Painter still painfully thin as of old?
Does Surbridge the weight of the world still uphold?

Does Georgie Mandell still continue to smile?
Are the neckties of Wetmore still quiet in style?

Is Hebard still proud of his lordly shape?
Has Whitney yet grown one inch by the tape?

Does G. Winthrop Lee still continue to find
New questions in morals to puzzle one's mind?

Have Herbert and Phil whose last name was Sears
Ever yet found a being quite one of their peers?
Can it yet be told of those Heavenly Twins
Where one of them ends and the other begins?

Are Greene's flowing whiskers still proudly displayed?
Is Copeland still trim as a sweet little maid?

Is Batchelder still as a bartender skilled?
Is Ward yet with knowledge completely filled?

Has Hathaway found how he got his degree?
Is Meeker still pious and good as can be?

Does Morse still show Cumnock how to play?
Does Marvin still work as hard night and day?

Has Derby yet reached three hundred pound weight?
Has he dyed yet his whiskers before 'tis too late?

Has Forbes yet discovered what class he was in?
Has Abbot yet cast off that cast iron grin?

Has Zinkeisen got any scholars to teach?
Does Smith still retain that complexion of peach?

Does Prescott indulge Lampy's fondness for beer
And Aldermen lead on a junket career?
Does he still look as solemn and grave and sedate
In the hopes to convince us he 'll ne 'er dissipate?

Does our King, who 's in Europe, expect there to find
A princess who 'll suit his fastidious mind?

Does the rest of the class still keep toeing the line?
If they do all is well now with old Eighty Nine.

* * * * * * * * * *

So we turn our thoughts away
From the present and to-day,
So we hear once more the old-time college shout;
But before we part, old men,
Let 's remember once again,
There 's a work before us still to carry out.

Don't leave it to a few
The work that you can do,
Don't to press and public talk e'er bend the knee;
Don't let it e'er be said
That your college spirit 's dead,
Don't think that when you 've left her you are free.

Don't stand and see her mocked,
Don't keep your lips fast locked,
Don't with graduates who work for her find fault;
But aid them then in their fight,
Back up Harvard in the right,
And repel, with elbows touching, all assault.

Strike the recent Harvard dead,
Let the new-born spirit spread
With its cry of "Do your duty to the rest";
For no fight was ever fought.
No success was ever wrought
Without "Loyalty" the watchword and the test.

So no praise without due work,
No rewards for those who shirk,
No honors paid to those who bring defeat;
No defeat without its blame,

And no victory with shame,
No knowledge that you 're beaten till you 've beat.

Breaking training a disgrace
That shall lose a man his place,
That shall brand him as a traitor to his cause ;
So with worth the only test,
None the winner but the best,
With the loyal man the one to win applause.

With her graduates all true,
Harvard men resolved to do,
Harvard confident and sure she 's going to win ;
Never challenges refusing,
No defeats whate'er excusing,
And breaking faith with Harvard deemed a sin.

In the century new born,
With the dark age past and gone
With the dawn of revolution in to-day ;
Let there spring with hopeful gleam,
From the dying old régime,
A truer sense of lealty in the fray.

That 's the spirit breeding here,
That 's the cry that ringing clear,
Must awake the Harvard hearts in every line ;
So go home throughout the land,
See that Harvard 's name shall stand
For Loyalty and Honor, Eighty Nine.
